TimeSpace: After Here by Richard McGuire
30 January to 11 September 2016

In his graphic novel Here the American illustrator Richard McGuire disbands the unity of time, space and action with a formal stroke of genius: in the ever-same here of an ordinary living room corner he introduces temporal insertions into each respective now, allowing fragments of the past to intrude and fragments of the future to flicker, and thus unfolding entire human lives as if in fast motion.

The exhibition TimeSpace will bring McGuire's room to life as a walk-in, act-in stage space. Visitors will be invited to move through the life-size setting and thus to become protagonists of the story themselves. TimeSpace will moreover pick up on the dissolution of the time-space continuum and inquire into what images, objects and science can tell us about the meaning of time for our lives.
